Flooding, road closures and outages close some state offices
For the second straight day, bad conditions keep offices closed on North Coast

Salem—For the second straight day, power outages, flooding and blocked roads have forced closure of most state offices in Clatsop and Tillamook Counties, the Oregon Department of Administrative Services announced today.

The closure affects all state agencies except 24-hour operations, such as the Oregon State Police, the Oregon Department of Transportation, and the state Department of Corrections. State officials are confident, however, that aggressive measures by state and local front-line agencies to reopen roads and provide relief to storm victims—and by utilities to restore power—will enable state agencies to resume routine services soon.
